

Biography

Dr. Randall Rhodes holds a Ph.D., MA, and a BA in Art History from the University of Chicago. He joined AUK in September 2020. In the past year, he has focused on institutional capacity building across administrative units and the implementation and revision of policies and procedures to ensure maximum institutional effectiveness and efficiency.

He came to the AUK from the American University of Armenia (AUA) where he served as Provost for five years. Prior to the AUA, he worked for 19 years at Frostburg State University, Frostburg, Maryland, where his breadth of roles included Professor, Assistant Dean of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, and Associate Provost. As part of his career development and disciplinary growth within the field of art history, he has had significant involvement in museum and gallery administration, presented academic papers at various international conferences, and exhibited art works at juried exhibitions. He is originally from Rochester, New York.